SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

May 7, 2020

Dear Faculty, Fellows, Residents, Students and Staff:

Effective immediately, Washington University School of Medicine is lifting the 60-mile-radius travel ban for personal travel. Travel restrictions remain in place for personal travel outside of the US based on CDC Recommendations. Vacation time must still be formally approved by your Chair, Division Chief, Program Director or Supervisor and is subject to limitations based on staffing needs. All university-sponsored and work-related travel is still prohibited including away electives for students, residents and fellows.

Sincerely,

David H. Perlmutter, MD
Executive Vice Chancellor for Medical Affairs and Dean
